ORIGINAL ESSAY WITH CORRECTIONS

In Zimbabwe, many young people have dreams. One young entrepreneur who inspires me is Tinashe. He started his own business when he was just 22 years old, and now he is very successful. His story is one of hard work and determination. Tinashe grew up in Harare. He came from a humble family. His parents did not have much money, but they always encouraged him to study hard. Tinashe loved school and was good at math. After finishing high school, he wanted to go to university, but his family could not afford it. Instead of giving up, he decided to start a small business selling snacks. At first, it was not easy. Tinashe used his savings to buy ingredients and make snacks at home. He sold them to friends and neighbors. Many people loved his snacks, and he began to make a profit. Tinashe saved every cent to grow his business. After a year, he had enough money to buy a small stall at a busy market. This was a big step for him. He worked long hours, waking up early and staying late. His hard work

TEACHER FEEDBACK

This is a good attempt at writing about an inspiring entrepreneur. Your ideas are clear and the story flows logically. To improve, focus on varying your sentence structures and expanding your vocabulary to make your writing more engaging and sophisticated.

IMPROVED VERSION FOR LEARNING

In Zimbabwe, many young people harbour ambitious dreams. One such inspiring young entrepreneur is Tinashe. He embarked on his own business venture at the tender age of 22 and has since achieved remarkable success. His journey is a testament to unwavering hard work and sheer determination. Tinashe's upbringing was in Harare, where he hailed from a humble family. Despite their limited financial means, his parents consistently instilled in him the value of diligent study. Tinashe excelled in school, particularly demonstrating a strong aptitude for mathematics. Upon completing high school, his aspiration was to attend university, but his family's financial constraints made this impossible. Instead of succumbing to despair, he resolved to launch a small business selling snacks. Initially, the path was fraught with challenges. Tinashe meticulously used his modest savings to procure ingredients and prepare snacks from home. He marketed them to friends and neighbours, and their popularity soon led to a steady profit. Tinashe diligently saved every cent to expand his burgeoning enterprise. After a year, he had amassed sufficient capital to acquire a small stall at a bustling market. This marked a significant milestone for him. He committed to arduous hours, rising early and working late into the evenings. His relentless dedication...
